

Arielle Rosales — BdA is a very special school that functions as a home for young dancers-in-training and pre-professionals. Students are encouraged to discover their individuality as artists and developing minds as the next generation of dancers in a safe, respectful, and caring environment whilst maintaining discipline, professionalism, and tradition. The curriculum is designed to produce well educated and technically trained classical dancers but exposes students to an array of styles and disciplines, resulting in not only well-trained dancers but versatile and cultured artists. Many faculty members commute from Manhattan, having worked with some of the premier dance studios and companies in the city, but we make it a point to come to Port Chester and take part in this wonderful school, as it is extremely rare to find this quality of training, individualized attention, and nurturing atmosphere, even in NYC. BdA is a wonderful community that I feel very honored to be a part of and would HIGHLY recommend to any family who has a young prospective dancer ready to take the next step!
